Inquest Back On Today

Posted on Tuesday, October 27, 2015 00:31 AM

It's back to business this morning for a high profile city inquest.

It's looking into the deaths of seven First Nation youth in Thunder Bay while they were attending high school over an 11 year period. The inquest took just over a week off as part of the two week on, one week off hearing schedule. It's expected to run for at least six months.

The first portion of the hearing looked into the medical reports on the deaths of three of the seven students, Jethro Anderson, Robyn Harper and Paul Panacheese.
